MEMORIAL SURVEY

COMPILED BY
FRESHFORD GRAVEYARD RECORDING GROUP

The memorial survey of St. Lachtain's Graveyard Freshford, one of the oldest ecclesiastical sites in County Kilkenny, provides the results of a community based graveyard recording project. It includes photographs and inscriptions of each of the 281 memorials recorded.

This project is an action of the Kilkenny Heritage Plan. It was supported by the Heritage Office of Kilkenny County Council and Eachtra Archaeological Projects. It is part of the Historic Graves Programme, a community based grassroots heritage recording project.

Foreword

The Church of St. Lachtain is a place of great antiquity. It is renowned for its Romanesque doorway, its architecture and the continuity of worship since its foundation in the 7th century.

Its adjacent graveyard, with its attendant memorials and headstones, is of significant social, cultural and archaeological interest. Historic graveyards link people to places. The headstone inscriptions give us a fascinating insight into the people who lived and died there, the craftsmen who carved the memorials, and life in the area.

The St. Lachtain's Church Conservation Plan (2004) commissioned by the Heritage Council identifies the insufficient knowledge and lack of interpretation of St. Lachtain's and the need to put in place measures to address this. This graveyard recording project does just that.

The project is the result of a huge voluntary community effort. This publication, an invaluable genealogical resource for future generations, is a testament to the hard work and enthusiasm of the Freshford Graveyard Recording Group. It has been a pleasure to work with and support the group. I hope that this publication and the accompanying on-line resources are read, referenced and enjoyed by people in Freshford, in County Kilkenny, and beyond for many years to come.

Introduction

St Lachtain's Old Graveyard, Freshford Lots, Freshford, Co. Kilkenny

By Ned Kennedy

In a rare display of humour, Ossory historian Canon Carrigan referred to Freshford Old Graveyard as "thickly tenanted". Unfortunately, residency for these tenants was of a more permanent nature than the usual contract. He referred only to four monuments, so the people of Freshford are indebted to the volunteers who conducted the recent survey of the graveyard with the help of Kilkenny County Council Heritage Section and the Historic Graves Project.

Freshford is situated on the banks of the Nuenna river which flows through the heart of the village. The river name is the Anglicised spelling of An Uaithne which means Green River. The moss growing on the riverbed still bestows a pleasant green hue to the flowing water as it did when inspiring its name, perhaps fifteen hundred years ago.

Around 400 A.D. the first settlers came from Munster in search of new lands. At the time north Kilkenny was known as Mágh Airgid Rois, the Plain of the Silver Birch. The invaders came from Muskerry in West Cork led by Cucraí, son of Duach. Having come so far into Ossory, they stopped on the banks of An Uaithne and broke new or fresh ground amongst the Silver Birches, which was called simply, but meaningfully, Achadh Úr or Freshfield. Unfortunately the descendants of our Norman conquerors later mistranslated this as Freshford because the Irish word Achadh, meaning field, sounded like the Irish word Áth, meaning ford. Thus we got our present day place name.

Evidence of the original settlement location was presented by the modern day phenomenon of an aerial photograph taken by the Ordnance Survey. When experts viewed the photograph they saw that the last remaining sections of the inner and outer enclosures of the early Christian settlement were still clearly visible near the church site. When the photograph was studied, an imaginary line was drawn from the section of ditch, still visible to the experts, in an arc from Prince's Bridge to Old Bridge Street to show us the dimensions of the settlement around the church grounds. The existence of both inner and outer enclosures is regarded as evidence of a high-prestige site. The chief buildings and sacred or ritual features were located within the inner enclosure while the more mundane activities were contained within the outer enclosure.

By now most of the inner enclosure, has been replaced by block walls but the remnant of the outer enclosure is today the northern boundary of the local national school separating the Scoil Lachtaín site from the houses on Kilkenny Street. The presence here of the plant "Alexander", which is associated with medieval sites, means that Freshford may be one of the few "living relics" of an early monastic site.

The invaders, in need of more land, continued their conquest eastwards through north Kilkenny. Leaving Achadh Úr, they cheekily called the next townland Bánta na Maoinigh, the Fields or Plains of the Munstermen. They continued their conquest eastwards and renamed the territory, known today as Three Castles, between Achadh Úr and and Cill Chainnigh, as Bán Ua nDuach, the Plain of Duach, in honour of their patriarch in Cork. Miraculously it has retained its grand old Irish name to this day.

A large settlement grew in Achadh Úr coinciding with the spread of Christianity in Ireland. Our patron saint Lachtain arrived late in the 6th century. He was born around the year 550 in west Cork, son of Toirbín and Senecha. He studied at Bangor in Co. Down under St. Comhghall. After ordination he came to preach God's word amongst his kinsmen or cousins in Ossory. He founded a church here which acquired importance because Lachtain is referred to as Bishop in some annals and he is listed as a bishop in St Mary's Cathedral.

In time Lachtain returned to his own people and founded a church at Cill na Martra in Cork. This translates as Church of the Relics and refers to the Shrine of St. Lachtain's Arm which was made for his relics but was confiscated during the Reformation. It was brought back from England in 1884 and can be seen today in the National Museum in Dublin. A holy well on the Kilkenny Road is known to this day as Tobar Lachtaín. In days of old it was the scene of an annual pattern and water from Tobar Lachtaín is reputed to hold a cure for ailments of the eye. Lachtain died in 622 and his feast day is celebrated on 19 March.

The greatest claim to fame of this grand old site is of course the Hiberno Romanesque church doorway. It was built around 1150 and has survived more or less intact to this day. The porch over the doorway was actually added when the church was rebuilt in 1730 but the doorway itself puts the site on a par with many of the ecclesiastical sites around Ireland. However, it is ironic that just as it acquired its iconic doorway and 12th century church, Achadh Ur's days were numbered. The Synod of Rathbrasil in 1118 defined the Irish dioceses as we know them today and Achadh Úr was subsumed into Ossory.

The Hiberno Romanesque church doorway of St. Lachtain's c.1150

St. Lachtain's Church of Ireland was renovated during the first decade of the 21st century. A Service of Thanksgiving took place in August 2012 to mark the completion of the restoration works.

Historic Graves Project

By John Tierney

In 2013 the Freshford Graveyard Recording Group in association with the Historic Graves Project, Kilkenny County Council and Kilkenny Heritage Forum set about the task of recording the memorials in St Lachtain's Old Graveyard. The focus of the project was the provision of training to enable them to record their local heritage sites (graveyards in particular) using professionally approved recording techniques. Training was conducted in field surveys where the emphasis was on 'learning by doing'. This meant that the training days produced publishable outcomes and a platform for local groups to disseminate their survey results, as the data they generated was uploaded to an online database at the Historic Graves website (<http://historicgraves.com/graveyard/st-lachtain-s/kk-stlt>).

The Historic Graves workshop was developed by Historic Graves, an initiative that aims to combine best professional practice in the recording of grave sites with community-led heritage projects. Training is provided using low-cost, high-tech equipment, enabling local communities to record their own heritage sites. The project was co-ordinated and funded by Kilkenny County Council as an action of Kilkenny Heritage Plan. This training was aimed at up-skilling participants, teaching volunteers to use simple items of high-specification 21st century technology to generate data (including geo-tagged photographs and audio files recording stories about graves and local characters).

Two days field survey training sessions were held in October 2013 in St Lachtain's Graveyard in Freshford. These were conducted in order to provide hands-on experience of graveyard surveys. The fact that participation at these survey days was limited to small groups of volunteers provided the opportunity for a large amount of one-to-one contact between learner and trainer. The field survey training comprised on-site work (primarily photographic surveys and inscription recording). A digital training session was held in the adjoining hall on the 12th of November 2013. The session focused on approaches to archiving and publishing the survey results using the Historic Graves website.

Michael Maher and Sheila Dooley recording gravestones

Field training included the identification of memorial types, photography and survey techniques. The identification of memorial types used the Guidance for the Care, Conservation and Recording of Historic Graveyards, published by the Heritage Council (2011). Forms provided in these guidelines were used to record the memorials and graves. Usage of a light source to illuminate the script on the memorials was taught to all participants. Rubbing techniques such as sponge-on-carbon paper were taught, for use on the illegible grave inscriptions and for recording the iconography carved on the headstones. Camera set-up, specifically designed for recording graveyard memorials, was taught during the photography sessions. This included information about geo-tagging photographs so that the results were compatible with a Global Navigation Satellite System such as GPS. Survey techniques covered how to produce a basic graveyard plan and how to keep track of all record sheets produced during the survey.

This project proved a great success, with field training provided for up to 11 people. This is a significant number of people in Freshford now trained in the basic skills required for contributing to a community-led heritage project, following methods of professional best practice. The hands-on field survey training days not only provided the opportunity to impart new skills to local volunteers, but also provided raw data that has been uploaded into the Historic Graves database. Record sheets were filled in, with the inscriptions from the headstones, by the participants. Photographs of all the memorials in the graveyard and the church were taken and a sketch plan was drawn. The results were uploaded to the Historic Graves database. A total of 281 graves were surveyed using geotagged photographs. A sketch plan of the graveyard and a thumbnail copy of the photographs, arranged on contact sheets, are available for download from the website. The majority of the grave inscriptions have now been entered into the database. This data has now been archived and submitted along with this report to the Kilkenny County Council Heritage Officer.

Survey Findings

By Ned Kennedy

281 memorials were surveyed and recorded in St Lachtain's Old Graveyard as part of this project. 200 of these have inscriptions. A further 135 people are known to be interred in here with no identifiable grave markings.

From the survey we learn that there are two 17th century monuments in the graveyard. The older one dates from the 1630s but the last digit of the year, according to Canon Carrigan, remained uncut. The monument is that of the Reverend Father Sir John Lalor dated 163-. Cornel (sic) John Geale's headstone of Cylhill (possibly Cullahill) states he died in April 1697. There are a number of readable headstones from the 18th century starting with that of Mrs. Penelope Ryves of Uppercourt who died in 1711. These 18th century monuments may one day contribute to the debate as to the oldest family in Freshford. We see headstones for the Cahel/Cahill families from the 1760s onwards while a Dawson monument dates from 1774 but they may be trumped by that of James Grace who died on 6 December 1736 if he can be traced to the Grace family of Kilkenny Street. He just edges out James Campion, another well established local surname, who died in 1743. The earliest monument to the Mahers of Graigueswood, whose descendants are still in Freshford, is dated 1757 while the headstone of Henry Dillon from Bawntinamina dates from 1779. The St. George's were in Woodsgift in the 16th century but came to Freshford in the middle of the 17th.

The grave of Reverend Fr Sir John Lalor, the oldest recorded memorial in St Lachtain's Old Graveyard dating to the 1630s

Some questions can be posed for future scholars. Is there a connection between Jeremiah Scully who died in 1840 and Scully of the Ranch, the notorious 19th century landlord on the Kilkenny/Tipperary border? What was the role of Richard Lalor of Cascade House in the Tithe War of the 1830s? What is the connection between the Lalors of Cascade and Peter Lalor, the revolutionary Australian political leader, and Richard Lalor who served a term in the New York State Assembly? Why did the Proctors, who raised a monument to their parents in 1899, emigrate to New Zealand? What circumstances caused the outbreak of diphtheria in 1880 when the Neill family of Knockown lost five family members between February 5th and March 19th?

Of course, the 12th century Irish inscription over the Romanesque church doorway, asking for a prayer for the builders, predates everything else in the cemetery. Without them, perhaps there would not have been a church or place of rest for the many interred hereabouts since then.

Sources and Notes for the Reader

The Freshford Graveyard Recording Group acknowledges the previous efforts to record the history of this Graveyard including work carried out by Margaret M. Phelan, accompanied by Madge Buggy, in their Memorials of the Dead- Freshford Old Cemetery and Garden of Remembrance for Kilkenny Archaeological Society in 1970. Third level students also recorded the graves in an unpublished document in 1993. In 2004, the Heritage Council commissioned St Lachtain's Church Conservation Plan to identify all significant built and natural heritage of St Lachtain's and to agree a vision for its conservation. This plan was written by Margaret Quinlan and Timothy Foley in association with the St Lachtain's Steering Group. The graveyard recording project addresses Policy E of the Conservation Plan. Canon Carrigan's The History and Antiquities of the Diocese of Ossory (1905) remains an essential source for any local studies research in Co. Kilkenny and was also consulted in the preparation of this publication.

Gaps in existing research, and in particular information on people buried in unmarked graves, or in graves where gravestones are uninscribed or whose inscriptions are illegible, were filled by accessing information from Roman Catholic Church records, the notebooks of undertaker Martin Kennedy (1874-1949) and from oral accounts. Oral accounts and recent archaeological excavations also tell us that human remains are known to be located outside the graveyard boundary walls.

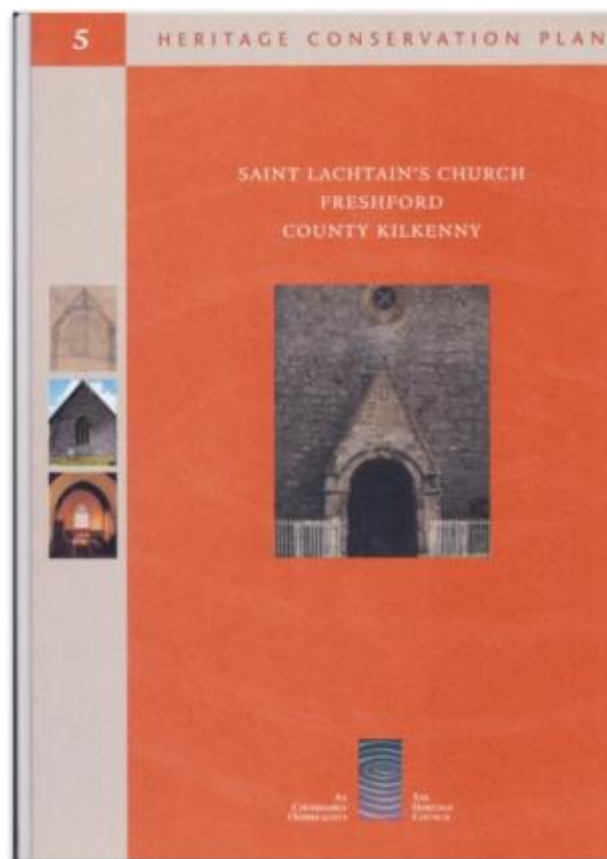

Unmarked Memorials in St Lachtain's Old Graveyard

Every effort has been made to ensure that names, dates and places are correct and the authors and publishers of this book accept no liability for any errors or omissions. Some spellings may appear to be unusual and so it must be noted that all inscriptions were transcribed directly from gravestones. The referencing system used in the project refers to Kilkenny (KK) - St Lachtain's (STLT) - the reference number of the individual memorial (0000) e.g.KK-STLT-0001. The names listed on the indices refer to all names inscribed on memorials in St. Lachtain's including those who erected the memorials.

If you are aware of any additional relevant information, or have any feedback or amendments, the authors would welcome them and they can be added to the data on the Historic Graves Website (<http://historicgraves.com/graveyard/st-lachtain-s/kk-stlt>).

St Lachtain's Old Graveyard Memorial Survey builds on the work of many and its immense historical significance is that it will act as a permanent record of the graveyard as the condition of the monuments deteriorates due to weathering and the passing of time.

The memorial survey of St. Lachtain's Graveyard Freshford, one of the oldest ecclesiastical sites in County Kilkenny, provides the results of a community based graveyard recording project. It includes photographs and inscriptions of each of the 281 memorials recorded.

This project is an action of the Kilkenny Heritage Plan. It was supported by the Heritage Office of Kilkenny County Council and Eachtra Archaeological Projects. It is part of the Historic Graves Programme, a community based grassroots heritage recording project.
